

HOW TRENDING: Twitter to Eliminate Third-Party Ads in User Timelines

Join more than 181,000+ people following us on Facebook

About 3 hours ago Brenna Ehrlich 1 Like 81

Anonymously Confess Your Cheating Ways [APPS]

660 retweet Share 81 4 digg email share

Want to have a good cry about the dismal state of the human race? Well, surf on over to CheatConfession.com. In the grand tradition of Texts From Last Night, PostSecret and good, old-fashioned Craigslist Missed Connections, this website is basically one big digital purge: A place to either confess that you're cheating on someone, being cheated on yourself, thinking about cheating on someone or that you are, in fact, "the other person."

In essence, the site could be an asset: It could help guilty parties alleviate their consciences a bit and perhaps gain some guidance as to how to extricate themselves from a delicate situation. It could also help those in hurtful relationships get out of, or perhaps patch up something that's been broken. But, given the structure of the website and its functionality, we're guessing that it's basically going to degrade into pure schadenfreude.

First of all, it's targeted toward a very broad demographic, which means it's prime stomping ground for trolls. Add in required anonymity and you've got a recipe for immature answers and wanton cruelty. (A look through some of the comment streams confirms our suspicions.)

The realm of Internet ? memes is getting dicey when it comes to sharing and commenting on the misfortunes of others. Popular sites like Texts From Last Night and FML ? include similar confessions, as well as the ability to comment. Still, what separates this site from the aforementioned memes is the format, which seems to suggest a community where one may ask for and give advice — rather than a venue in which to share amusing (albeit sad-sack) anecdotes.

What do you think of CheatConfession? Share your thoughts in the comments.

image courtesy of iStockphoto ?, A1Stock

For more social media coverage, follow Mashable Social Media on Twitter ? or become a fan on Facebook ?

Mashable is an online guide to social media. [\[+\]](#)

Join the 2.6 Million people following Mashable

More Subscription Options >

Get stronger & smarter

Hone your display advertising with more precise campaign controls.

Learn More >

Google Content Network

youtube.com/contentnetwork

Ads by Google

 Mashable on Facebook

Like

Mashable has 196,695 fans

MASHABLE PARTNERS

